"In my years in the Industry I am often asked for advice from people on how to get started—how to land that first job. But I've never come across such a creative approach as this! Ms Batailler has crafted an unexpected and wildly imaginative narrative in her quest to scale those studio walls. She deserves a good long interview—at the very least!!" –Ron Judkins, two-time Academy Awards Winner & five-time Nominee.

"Stephanie Batailler has made an exotic adventure out of a desultory job interview, a dream out of a dilemma...Ms. Batailler takes the won out of "wonderful" and turns it into winsome." –Frank Hazard, author of Escape From Phalaris, the Sow Belly stories, and The Fatal Heist.

"Imagine a job interview on Mr. Toad's wild ride down the rabbit hole through the land of Oz with fantastical creatures of wonderland narrated like the cult film classic A Christmas Story...A comical looking glass on modern society." –Goodreads

"A fun and witty satire about an aspiring filmmaker. Same thing as when I step into the fighter's cage: I can't wait to see how the story unfolds." –Herb Dean, four-time consecutive World MMA Awards Winner.

"It's a job interview gone crazy...I can assure you that the author has an overflowing imagination and I adore it!" –BookPlaisir

"You've got to differentiate yourself. And she (the author) succeeded 100%." –Le Réveil Normand (France)

"The first rule of storytelling whether it's a movie, a television show, or a book, is to create characters the audience likes and can relate to. Tale of a Job Interview does just that." –H. Daniel Gross, EVP The Basketball Channel (former Development Executive at Miramax/Dimension Films.)

"Funny, imaginative, charming, and heartfelt, Tale of a Job Interview at OhlalaLand is the perfect pick-me-up for the hopeful (or hopeless) seeker of employment." –Amazon reader.

"A modest volume by its size...but a bold approach that we believe will pay off as for readers who are also employers, they will definitely enjoy the book, discovering that there is a new way to 'sell yourself'" –Daily Book.

"So many times in America we settle on a job we really don't want. Those lies that we are told to never stop dreaming that you can be anything you want, but in reality society creates so many road blocks and often the gate keepers are sitting on mount high. It's people like Stephanie that shows us to keep pushing." –Hannibal's review (iBook)
